Rude Mechanicals

— East Sussex, Great Britain

Back by popular demand, the Old Git returns! And this time he claims to know a thing or two about gin. Yes, he'll drone on about how the nation's favourite spirit 'isn't made like it used to be', in fact for this Old Git nothing ever is... Well, this time he's wrong, because here's a gin that actually is! Old Git Gin is a gin made just as it should be. Traditionally double distilled in two-hundred litre copper alembic stills, with a handful of heady botanicals, for a racy gin packed with charm, that will delight even the stiffest of gin bores.

Production

No corners were cut when it comes to the gin inside the bottle. Distilled by one of the the UK's finest Master Distillers, using only the highest quality ingredients and diligent distillation methods. A small batch gin, made from scratch using English sugarbeet. Double distilled with its botanicals in 200l copper alembics for extra flavour and a exceptionally smooth finish.

Tasting note

Juniper led and refreshingly dry. Full of citrus notes, and summer berry richness, with a smooth cardamom finish.

Food Match

Best served over ice as one part Old Git Gin to three parts good tonic. Garnish with a wedge of fresh orange or pink grapefruit.
