Trumao is a name of Mapuche origin that identifies the soil of volcanic formation present in this area, marking the grapes with a mineral and graphitic character.

Production

The quarters of this vineyard are oriented towards the north, inspiring its name, Trumao. This is a name of Mapuche origin that identifies the soil of volcanic formation present in this area, marking the grapes with a mineral and graphitic character. These are deep soils with a precise organic matter composition that allows the vines with a very sensitive root system, such as Merlot and Cabernet Franc, to establish themselves in a balanced and sustainable manner over time. The blocks of this vineyard are oriented towards the north, inspiring the name of this wine. Harvested by hand early in the morning, 80% of the grapes are destemmed and fermented in concrete tanks with native yeasts at controlled temperatures. Gently macerated for 22 to 24 days of alcoholic fermentation, then racked into 400-liter French barrels for 16 months. Made with minimal work intervention and bottled unfiltered.

Tasting note

Trumao Norte is a reactive and very intense wine. With an aroma marked by volcanic touches, graphite and the native forest of Colbún. It has great complexity and a intense elegant ruby red colour. Silky tannin and structure is ideal to accompany food.An exciting complex array of flavours already but surely even more to come over the next few years

Food Match

Its silky tannin and structure is ideal to accompany food with intense flavours, such as meat, especially lamb. Also with chocolate with a high percentage of cocoa.
