Margaret Lehmann is the great woman beside the great man. Peter Lehmann winemakers rewrote the rulebooks of Barossa Semillon in the early 90s, eschewing oak and opting for an early-picked style that lent itself to ageing. The result is Margaret Semillon. Released after five years cellaring, it has youthful lemongrass aromas and citrus acidity that belie its age; and complexity you would expect from an aged white with a bountiful trophy cabinet.

Production

Sourced from long standing Peter Lehmann growers, 50% Fiebeger Home Block (Vine Vale), planted in 1945 and 50% Scholz Willows Home Block (Light Pass), planted in 1936.

The grapes are picked early and fermented cold for two weeks in stainless steel tanks to retain fruit delicacy. Following a two-week fermentation period, the wine is fined, clarified and filtered and bottled prior to a five-year maturation period in their temperature controlled warehouse.

Tasting note

A nose of lifted lemon curd, lime juice, green apple and nashi pear aromas, with a hint of lanolin and savoury biscuit in the background. The flavour is classic Margaret Semillon, pure lemon sherbet acidity and waxy blossoms accompanied by a subtle complex honeyed palate that is developing weight and a creamy texture beautifully. A length of lychee juice and floral characters round out this sophisticated wine beautifully.

Food Match

A superb accompaniment to pan-seared scallops in a garlic cream sauce, baked snapper or roast chicken or pork with mixed herb rubs.
